You don't need a prince and princess for your heroes to live happily ever after. When two children get lost in an enchanted forest, they must use all their powers of imagination to save them from the crafty old woman in the candy house and lead them back to their loving parents. The music of Engelbert Humperdinck brings an inventive theatricality to the retelling of this classic fairy tale. Another feast for the eyes and ears from Master Puppeteers.

Audiences were truly smitten with Karl Schaeffer's lonely old birthday boy and the unlikely friend he makes in a wandering red balloon. This immersive, non-verbal play invites the audience to direct the action making no two shows ever alike. You'll be in awe of your child's (and your own) laughter and reaction to the adventure between the old man and the balloon.

The job of this larger-than-life vegetarian is to blow magical dreams into children's bedrooms. For a young orphan "human bean", however, the sight of the giant is too much and she fears for her life when he takes her away to an enchanted land. The harmless, cheeky BFG ultimately shows that heroes can come in all sizes.
